It was a mighty fine program that the patrons of the Pavilion saw last night. Every number was excellent, both acts being so good that it is really hard to tell which pleased the most. Reid and his dogs scored many laughs and caused much wonder and astonishment. One of the great points of beauty about this act is the willingness with which the dogs do their tricks. It seems to be a matter of play with them and each one seems to do its utmost to please the audience. The three Livlys also scored heavily, all being excellent dancers. The lady of the trio wears a medal which she won in a dancing contest at Philadelphia. She is very proud of it and wears it at every performance.
